

I WOULD REALLY LOVE TO...

Oh, how I would love that, starting today, you would become my skin
So that I could take you places where I have never been.
We would ride from rose to rose, our souls floating in the wind,
And when the time comes and we need to rest, I would lie on your chest,
And we would meet again underneath this same strange sky.

*And through a long, long kiss,
A kiss as long as your body's length,
I would realize that not even a dream
Could have been tenderer.*

Oh, how I would love to be perfumed by your breath,
And to know that there will be no end,
That end that makes us leave each other at a certain time,
Since people think that Love requires a moon
To allow its honey to run freely through our hearts.

*And through a long, long kiss,
A kiss as long as your body's length,
I would realize that not even a dream
Could have been tenderer.*

Oh, how I would love to trade you for my guitar,
So I could hug you and make my poem out of you
And have your loving words become the caresses of my night,
So that the arriving dawn would compete against our light.

*And through a long, long kiss,
A kiss as long as your body's length,
I would realize that it's no dream,
And I would tell you that I love you.*
